Ultras meet writer Alessandro Marchi, author of the book "Fegato e cuore" (Leaver and heart) and Gianluca Marcon director and author of self produced documentary "E noi ve lo diciamo" (And we'll tell you).

"Fegato e cuore" tells about Steve Campbell, who has two hearts: one is in the living room under formalin; the other one pulsates in his breast. The first stopped his career as English football star, the beats of the second one scan a degraded existence in London East End, with West Ham matches as only reason for life. When Vincenzo Caligiuri, young Italian immigrant, meets him serving hamburger in a fast food, can not imagine as Steve will change his daily life. They will both share, between a stop in a pub, strange friends and many football matches of multiethnic and colourful Bari Football Club on hard pitches of cold English mornings.

18.00 – Piazza Antirazzista

Mondiali Antirazzisti: how to set a festival. What antiracism has to do with environment and diet: distribution of resources and social injustices concerning the "hording" of primary goods (water/energy/food). An unequal distribution in a global system that produces discrimination.

Ja Tarramutu: a travel inside city more mystified of Italy, by Paolo Pisanelli (89 min.).

The movie tells about the mystified and "media-observed" city of L'Aquila, which after the earthquake of April 6th 2009 passed from resignation to revolution through thousands transformations, intertwining stories of people, places, building sites, voices and laughter of "jackals", business men who caused the Wheelbarrow Protest, when the earthquake was no more a media news. "Take back the city!", shouted L'Aquila inhabitants and they organised to remove the rubbles, showing the willing to nor resign to silence, even if forced to live in the peripheries of a ghost town.

This is L'Aquila, voices after 3 years from earthquake, by Andrea Cardoni and Andrea Ranalli (23 min.)

"This is L'Aquila" is a collection of stories of who is living in a destroyed town, because of the earthquake of April 9th 2009, that destroyed L'Aquila. Spotlights turn off on the city, but L'Aquila people still exist. How they live now? How changes daily life of a town stopped three years ago?

International photographers network Shoot4Change and Anpas, National Association for public assistance, unite strengths to turn on the light again on the memory of that tragic event.

Narrating voice and face: Moni Ovidia
